"What is a CPT code?" If you don't already have it, you'll find yourself asking that question at some point when you hit yourself with an unexpected medical bill. In particular, if you have switched to an HDHP from a more traditional HMO/PPO health insurance plan. I found out that a CPT code was the hard way when my health insurer wouldn't pay the bill. I'll share what I've learned, why it's important, and how you can search for CPT codes by yourself with the aim of saving significant money on medical expenses. What are the CPT codes? CPT stands for "Current Procedural Terminology." Every medical, diagnostic or surgical procedure or service has a 5-digit CPT code assigned to it. CPT codes are created, marked, and published by the American Medical Association (AMA). They have now become the standard for doctors, coders, patients and insurance companies to label and identify medical services and procedures. Why are CPT Codes so important? CPT codes are of primary importance for a few different reasons: They are used by insurers to determine the amount of reimbursement that a professional will receive under your health insurance coverage (and ultimately, how much of the bill will be left responsible). As a continuation of #1, they are used by insurers to determine whether a particular procedure is considered to be well-being or disease-related - especially important if you have a highly deductible plan. They can be used by you to diagnose medical billing errors. They can be used by you to find out exactly what kind of diagnosis, doctor, or surgical work your doctor has required for you. Important things. What to do when you arrive through a CPT code When your primary care doctor orders up work to be done by others, hopefully they will have a conversation with you about exactly what the work will be. Then they will send you away with a piece of paper stating exactly what that work is. On that piece of paper will be a set of 5-digit CPT codes. Whenever you encounter this or a similar scenario, I recommend you: Confirm CPT Code: Find out if all the codes have been entered correctly so that you do not have work done you did not expect. If your doctor did not cover exactly what job they were asking for, you have the right to find out why they requested in the first place. Get the best price: Contact your health insurer to find out if the service is considered a wellness quote and is fully covered by your plan. If it is not, insurers have pre-negotiated rates with practitioners and some may have lower prices than others. How to make a CPT You won't be able to find a free list of CPT codes anywhere, as WADA owns the copyright and license fees those who publish them. Third parties publish them, but charge for access to the list. I was able to get a list of preventive CPT codes for my health insurance plan from my employer employer Department. You may be able to do the same. You can also search for keyword or 5-digit code through the AMA CPT code (free registration is required). Lessons learned about CPT codes Returning to the invoicing dispute I said earlier, the importance of CPT codes will be evident. My wife and I went in to the annual physical exams and our doctor ordered blood tests. We didn't think about it, they made us a blood withdrawal, and then they hit us with $ 612 banknotes. What I discovered after months of research is that four of the CPT codes on the blood tests ordered by our doctor were not covered by my HDHP as well-being prevention. I was able to cut $ 493 of blood preventive work from the bill because my health insurer had incorrectly loaded all soul work as a non-preventive, related disease. I still had to pay the bill for $ 119 that were considered quotes. Teachings taken from this experience: if you had called the insurer before the time to run the CPT codes from them, I would have known what was considered quote and what is not. Those who were not quotes, I could have asked my doctor because they were ordered and if it was necessary. This would also have suggested it out on what my bills should be so you can compare them with my actual bills when they arrived. Is it a pain? Of course yes. But you should do it the same. If a certain job had yet been needed, I could have asked the insurer where I could receive the lowest fare to make those blood exam. This would have behaved costs less than 119 dollars. Always question your medical invoices. This saved me 493 dollars on simple blood tests. I know this sucks and sounds a little painful, but this is the status of our disabled health system. More you understand the language and how your doctor is communicating with doctors and insurers, more money you will save. And the CPT codes are at the center of all this.
